HE SAW TUCKER CHELSEA'S INSPECTOR'S BIG BLAZE Board of Health Again Appointing Any!

Witness in the Murder Trial So Testifies Today.

Court House, East Cambridge, Jan. 12.—When the Tucker murder trial opened this morning, Oliver Kingsbur, a canoe builder, with a place in Auburndale, was called as the first witness. On the day of the murder of Miss Page, he was on the Weston bridge, when the whistle on a factory blew, indicating 12 noon.

"Did you see Tucker?" asked Mr. Sanderson.

"Yes," replied the witness. "Where on the bridge?"

"About two-thirds of the way over the bridge."

"Which way was he going?"

"Toward Weston way."

"Did you speak to him?"

"I passed the time of day, that was all."

"Did you see him later?"

"Yes."

"Where was it?"

"In Emerson's boathouse at Riverside. Henry Bourne was with him."

"Did you see him do anything?"

"Nothing in particular. He just staid around there."

In cross-examination the witness said he had known Tucker for some time. When he saw him on the day of the murder Tucker was walking at an

STRIKE BREAKERS.

Those Brought into Fall River Rejected by Mills as Useless.

Fall River, Jan. 12.—The first effort to import strike breakers for the mills was made this morning and ended in a failure.

Charles H. Carr, a local cotton broker, has been for some time arranging with agents in New York and New Jersey to secure operatives and ship them here. In the meantime he claims to have received assurance from the managers of several of the mills that they would take all the importations he made off his hands. This morning three arrived on the steamer Plymouth.

The first intimation of their arrival was a telephone message to the central police station asking for a squad of policemen to watch or protect a party of 99 troops in the waiting rooms at the wharf station. Several men were dispatched there at once.

The newcomers were led by Mercedes de Bonera, who had been engaged to secure strike breakers. He failed to get the men, so he hid the next best thing and came along with a crowd that had never seen a cotton mill.

Mr. Carr was notified early, but it was well after 8 when he arrived at the wharf station. He had been preceded there by Supt. Connors of the Massachusetts State Police, and the American linen mills. They had been notified that the men had arrived and they went early to get their pick.

Upon finding that it was an inexperienced crowd with no weavers in the number, Supt. Connors ordered them then without hiring any of them. Miss McCarr called up different mills by telephone to take the men off his hands. Several agreed to try them in blocks of six.

The first lot was sent to the Merchants' mill and was back at the station before the last-detailed men appeared. They said that all they had been offered at the Merchants' was from $1 to $2 a week. They declared they had not been told that there was a strike here, and had been informed that they were wanted in a new mill about to be started. Some had given up places at which they were earning $8 to $10 a week.

Old Academy of Music Destroyed—Here!—Rescues by K. of C. Members.

Boston, Jan. 12.—The most serious fire in the history of Chelsea broke out shortly before midnight, destroying the Academy of Music, the only play house in the city, rendering at least 50 families homeless, endangering the lives of more than 50 people and throwing the inhabitants of the city into a state of fear and excitement.

The fire broke out in the Academy with its discovery flames were seen bursting from all the windows. Hardly had the firemen reached the scene when they discovered that they had a great task before them.

Just as the Academy of Music was in flames, the Hotel Savoy caught fire, and for a time it looked as if the Park Hotel was also doomed, but it was saved.

Those who happened to be in Chelsea square at the outbreak of the fire say that never before had they witnessed such a sight as the rescuing of the 50 or more persons who were in the building.

The people in the brick block, 172 to 181 Westminster street, had the most thrilling experiences. None of them knew of the fire until they were awakened by Patrolman William F. Golden and Patrol A. McGauley, and the members of Chelsea lodge, K. of C., who were holding an entertainment, the work of installing the recently-elected officers having just finished.

It was just 12:03 when patrolman W. F. Golden and Morrison, while standing in the square directly in front of the academy, were startled by hearing an explosion, followed by the crashing of glass.

Flames issued from every window in front and the alarm was immediately called in from box 25. When the firemen arrived the building was burning furiously and a second alarm was immediately sounded, followed by the summoning of apparatus from Revere and Everett, and a few minutes after this assistance was asked from Boston by the ringing of an alarm from the Chelsea fire station. District Chief Keyser and several pieces of the West Boston apparatus.

There were about 100 members in the K. of C. rooms when the explosion occurred and the building was dropped and the members, which brought the burning building being directly opposite.

The word was given that the building adjoining the academy, that from 173 to 181 Westminster street, was on fire and the men in the building were ordered to evacuate the building as business places.

Headed by Patrolman McGauley, a member of the council, every one began the work of rescuing the inmates. Some of the rescued were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Burr, first floor, 177; Katherine, Magie, Thomas, Bella, George and Fred Daeny and their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Daeny, who lived at 183; Mr. and Mrs. Orrin Rowen of 181; Maude, Andrew, Nora, and Lizzie Leonard, 175; Mrs. William F. Moore and two children, 175; Mr. and Mrs. John Burke, and their 13 year old son; Adrain; 177; Mrs. Jennie Moore and her daughter, Winifred; Mr. and Mrs. George E. Young of 181; the Hotel Savoy, Mrs. M. B. Parsons of the Hotel Savoy, Mr. and Mrs. Louisa G. Lyman, and their two boys, 173; Mr. and Mrs. White and Mrs. Margaret Hanahan, second floor, 173.

There were many others rescued whose names could not be learned.

with morning on but these night clothing men of these people were taken from their rooms by the arrival of their heroic rescuers, who threw about them their overcoats, jackets or any garment they could lay hands on, and brought them quickly as possible to the K. of C. rooms.

For at least 15 minutes this heroic work went on.

The property loss will reach $100,000.

Board of Health Again Appointing Any!

The regular semi-monthly meeting of the board of health was held Thursday morning. The matter of the election of a sanitary inspector was again put over after much discussion relative to whether he is needed. The board recommended that the city physician be given charge of contagious diseases and vaccination at an increased salary. Other matters were discussed for a time and the meeting did not close until 11 o'clock.

Chairman Burger called the meeting to order at 9:45 o'clock. Clerk Doble read the minutes of the previous year's meeting and they were accepted and approved.

The communication from the Civil Service Commission, certifying Jacob Green for the position of sanitary inspector was first considered. Dr. Kennedy had nothing to say on the matter at first. Mr. Bourget stated that he had not changed his opinion and he still felt the place ought to be filled and a man appointed. Dr. Kennedy stated that the alieys were in bad condition but he did not know the lack of a sanitary inspector was the cause of it.

Formerly the duties of the office were hours to house inspectors, supervision of stables, house drains, bath rooms, pediculations. He stated that the election of a sanitary inspector was made 24 of the past year. Dr. Kennedy was first porary entorpr and the chairman. Dr. Kennedy then was appointed. He field was collected and they were accepted and approved.

CIVIL SERVICE RI

Supreme Court Decides (Be Removed at End of

Haverhill, Jan. 12.—The civil service law does not apply to an appointee whose term of office has expired, according to a decision of the full bench of the supreme court, handed down yesterday in the matter of the petition brought by Edwin F. Smith against Roswell L. Wood, mayor of Haverhill, et al, with a view to procure a writ of mandamus, in order to effect his reinstatement to the police force of that city.

Mr. Wood was appointed in 1899 under the charter then in force, and was removable at pleasure, but the charter was amended subsequently and a removal could not be made by the mayor and aldermen, except for sufficient cause and after a due hearing.

In 1894 changes which took effect that statute the four years. In appointed for the expired the first but he held over until Radcliffe's stated.

He thought the mayor and board upon the civil service law had recognized him force since he sufficient cause, not.

means used to obtain news as related by Mr. Mack gave some side lights on the history of that time that were out of the usual run and some of the details could not have been divulged if one of the principal actors was not now dead.
 In conclusion Mr. Mack made an appeal for the great body of newspaper men. He said: "When you pick up your daily paper and complain of the meagreness of the news, remember that there may be only a six line paragraph in the paper which has been obtained at a cost of time, effort and faithfulness inconceivable to the lay mind."

LAWRENCE BAR ASSOCIATION.

Lawyers Take Steps to Form Incorporated Society.

In response to a call the attorneys of this city held a meeting in the superior court room at the court house Wednesday afternoon for the purpose of making preliminary arrangements for incorporation.

William J. Bradley called the meeting to order and presided until after the election of a list of officers.

It was voted to form an association and to make application for a charter as soon as the arrangements can be completed. The name of "The Lawrence Bar Association" was adopted.

The following were elected officers for the ensuing year:

President, William S. Knox; vice president, William J. Bradley; clerk, John C. Sanborn, Jr.; treasurer, John P. Kane; executive committee, the president and treasurer, John J. Donovan, Harry R. Dow and Judge N. P. Frye; library committee, Judge Charles A. DeCoursey, Paul R. Clay and Matthew A. Gregg.

The application for a charter is signed by about 70 local lawyers.

The purpose of this move on the part of the lawyers is to extend the library and to place it on a more permanent basis. A larger appropriation for its maintenance will be asked for.
